Business Case for Executive Coaching

A MetrixGlobal LLC study for a Fortune 500 firm and Pyramid Resource Group concluded, “Coaching produced a 529% return on investment and significant intangible benefits to business. Including the financial benefits from employee retention boosted the overall ROI to 788%.”

According to Manchester Inc., a Florida-based coaching firm, investments in coaching yield an average ROI of almost six times the cost of the coaching (Jan. 2001, HR.com).
